Demographic and Health Surveys (DHS) are a series of standardized surveys that provide information on a wide range of demographic and health indicators. These surveys are conducted in many countries around the world, and the data collected is used to monitor and evaluate population trends and health status. The DHS program is a joint effort of the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The program has been successful in providing high-quality data on a wide range of demographic and health indicators, and this data is used to inform policy and program decisions. The DHS program is a valuable resource for researchers, policymakers, and the public alike.
