4.a. Rationale

The rationale for this study is to provide a comprehensive overview of the current state of research on the topic. The study is based on a review of the literature, which has identified a need for more research in this area. The study aims to fill this gap by providing a detailed analysis of the data available. The study is organized into several sections, each of which focuses on a different aspect of the topic. The first section provides an overview of the topic, while the subsequent sections provide more detailed information on specific aspects. The study is based on data from the CDHS 2016 survey, which is a nationally representative sample of the population. The data were collected using a multi-stage sampling method, which ensures that the sample is representative of the population. The data were collected using a multi-stage sampling method, which ensures that the sample is representative of the population.

4.b. Comment and limitations

The study has several limitations, which are discussed in this section. The first limitation is the sample size, which is relatively small. This may limit the generalizability of the findings. The second limitation is the data source, which is a self-reported survey. This may lead to bias in the data. The third limitation is the time period, which is relatively short. This may limit the ability to draw conclusions about long-term trends. The study has several strengths, which are also discussed in this section. The first strength is the use of a nationally representative sample, which ensures that the findings are generalizable. The second strength is the use of a multi-stage sampling method, which ensures that the sample is representative of the population. The third strength is the use of a self-reported survey, which allows for the collection of detailed information on the topic. The study is organized into several sections, each of which focuses on a different aspect of the topic. The first section provides an overview of the topic, while the subsequent sections provide more detailed information on specific aspects. The study is based on data from the CDHS 2016 survey, which is a nationally representative sample of the population. The data were collected using a multi-stage sampling method, which ensures that the sample is representative of the population.

4.c. Method of computation

The method of computation used in this study is described in this section. The data were analyzed using a series of statistical tests, which are described in detail in the appendix. The first test was a chi-square test, which was used to assess the relationship between the variables. The second test was a logistic regression model, which was used to estimate the odds ratios. The third test was a multivariate regression model, which was used to control for confounding factors. The study is organized into several sections, each of which focuses on a different aspect of the topic. The first section provides an overview of the topic, while the subsequent sections provide more detailed information on specific aspects. The study is based on data from the CDHS 2016 survey, which is a nationally representative sample of the population. The data were collected using a multi-stage sampling method, which ensures that the sample is representative of the population.
